no addition to the present means of the arrangements of the rounds of the city by the active energy of a number whose duties would not be confined to, but who under the direction of them, would make visits at parts of the night when neither the watchmen nor the them. It also appeared desirable of controlling the watchmen, and guilty of misconduct should be de- of the difficulties which were thrown of parliament; but still he conceived were not insuperable. A committee for this purpose, consisting of one each district; or, if that were ter he submitted to the town's his purpose, into two districts, and a in each. A number of minor t doubt be hereafter adopted; and probably occur to the members of he meeting should think proper to be submitted by a correspondent e police of other places where better ent were in use; and especially with ere he understood there had been a efficient footing, which gave great inhabitants. There was one subject ee of motion, on which he had not yet to the wages of the watchmen. ipated to say their present wages in the present state of the police funds, very proper subject for inquiry when was one fact, which served to shew that, ere high enough to ensure a sufficient ter for the situation of watchman, re were no less than 300 applications which might occur. Of course he need all the suggestions he had thrown out consideration of the committee in the if they should be there approved, of rewards; and the meeting were not pledge themselves to any specific alter- system. He concluded by moving for terms of the notice.

JOHN SMITH seconded the motion.

TOOKE LAY expressed some doubts whe- tions as were proposed, could be made ne act of parliament; adding that, in t he would, if he could, give his assent by the exertions of the district

Mr. JOHN WOOLLEN made similar spect to light, particularly in districts, but it in many of the districts there was no r the watchmen. They thought, how- rol would be set up by the exertions of t exert commissioners.—After a few observa- HUTWORTH, Mr. W. WALKER, and ustees, Mr. LAY's motion was replied, was put and carried unanimously.

FOR THE DEPUTY CONSTABLE.

HARROTTLE (one of the constables) d be in the recollection of the commis- e last resolution which was passed, to stables to take a lease of a suitable resi- y constable; and they now had an offic- nore eligible than the one which he had d which they now submitted to the meet- sary to give an immediate answer to the ve in question, as those premises were occupied by Mr. John Walker; and the them was 140 guineas a year.—a higher in the contemplated salary.

The premises, however, were much ewider would require; and by re-letting them, the expense to the parish would be lessened. It was calculated, that about twenty pounds in alterations, premises might be re-let, as would a year; thus reducing the rent to 80 the commissioners required it, Mr. La- erake, at his own risk, to re-let that part- ourable offer could be obtained. It was ace. In addition to the £20. necessary for it would be needed for fixtures, which tively required to be purchased. The These had been valued; and the value put at the £20. required for alterations, would gion. LAY observed, that the clerk was authorized to contract for a lease of the ion; and that £100. should be granted fo- ial measures. At the same time, he de- ables were perfectly in the hands of the commissioners thought the rent too much; that the whole of the premises ought to be re- or that Mr. Lavender ought to guarantee —they had only to express their opinion, his would implicitly obey.

In discussion, Mr. SERJEANT suggested he resolution that it was informal, inas- to alter the existing order of the commis- ly empowered the constables to provide a deputy-constable, when the police build- sed of. It would therefore require notice, ut then such notice has not been given. e, that at the next general meeting he matter before the commissioners.

then adjourned to Wednesday, December

CCIDENT IN LIVERPOOL.—On Wednes- most dreadful accident occurred at the es- and cotton mills of Messrs. Ackers and Spinfields, which has been attended with s lives. It is very well known to the public store of most combustible and other powers- ost-secure smell insues, are obliged to have chimnies, in order that the smoke may be arried off without being felt in the neighbo- ners. Ackers and Co. had on their premises inals, extending to a height of about ninety et. Yesterday morning about three hours be- duty is in such case in charge of the fur- night, heard a noise as of some person knock- e required who was there, and he, on open- er, he instantly perceived that the noise chimney. Alarmed at what might happen, watchman, and relating what had occurred- s came into the yard where the watchman, low- ly refused to do so, and requested the work- out, which he did, and most providentially he which occurred at the time, for the next onderous chimney, the smelting-house, &c. of ruins! Messrs. Ackers' premises are back by a dense and small house, occupied t in Norris-court; and the houses, Nos. 3, 4, arly destroyed; the mass of bricks falling on ke through them, and in the fall the floors ke through them, and in the fall the floors ntroying the furniture, and carrying destruc- ogress. The accident happening at a time rson was in bed, it is only a matter of wonder e dug out of the ruins quite dead; one per- taken to the Infirmary, most grievously in- understand that hopes are entertained of her many others were considerably hurt by the upon them; but all the information we to glean, we cannot find that any blame reats idual whatever, nor is there the slightest ground able cause of the accident. Messrs. Ackers ve by rebuilding a small furnace near to the chim- t, but the workmen do not appear to have had ner dimensions of the chimney exist. As soon it occurred, a messenger was dispatched to Mr. ssided out of town, and that gentleman immed- d on the spot; and a coroner's inquest was

At twelve o'clock a coroner's jury was sum- the bodies of the unfortunate persons who were evidence was produced, and the jury returned a ridual whatever, nor is there the slightest ground ble cause of the accident. Messrs. Ackers ve by rebuilding a small furnace near to the chim- t, but the workmen do not appear to have had ner dimensions of the chimney exist. As soon it occurred, a messenger was dispatched to Mr. ssided out of town, and that gentleman immed- d on the spot; and a coroner's inquest was

At twelve o'clock a coroner's jury was sum- the bodies of the unfortunate persons who were evidence was produced, and the jury returned a

PRESENTATION OF PLATE TO THE REV. JAMES ASPINALL, A. M. LATE CURATE OF ROCHDALE.—

A splendid piece of plate, consisting of a number of articles, was presented to the Rev. gentleman, on Wednesday the 22d ult. for the purpose of presenting the plate above alluded to. At eleven o'clock a highly respectable portion of the inhabitants of Rochdale being assembled in the large room at the Wellington Hotel, John Entwisle, Esq. of Foxholes, was called to the chair, and immediately addressed himself to Mr. A—— Mr. Aspinall, I am deputed by the inhabitants of Rochdale to present you with this plate, as a small tribute of respect and gratitude for your exertions and valuable services in behalf of the poor. That season of unparalleled distress which has afflicted this district through so great a portion of the present year, and to expose to you their warmest thanks for those services, to which I also most sincerely add my own." Mr. Aspinall then made the following reply:—

Gentlemen:—I have heard of some one who regretted that gratitude had not a language peculiar to itself, so inadequate are all the common phrases in use to express the sentiment. Such a regret I must now adopt, and echo as my own. And, in truth, good cause have I for it, so, whether I look back to the past, or look forward in my thoughts to the contingencies of the present time. When I revert to the past, it tells me of circumstances which your generosity has much above my deserts as beyond my hopes; but, therefore, do I receive it in the kindly character in which it is offered, as a friend; a stranger, but was treated as a brother. And when I exchange the past for the present, and the scene of your kindness deepens what are the feelings which should have possession of my heart as this splendid testimony of your gratitude. But, gentlemen, those feelings should be, such, however ill or feebly my tongue may express them, I am confident, they are. Would I, notstanding the complimentary strain which has been used on this occasion by our respected friend Mr. ——, I am free to confess that this token of your esteem is as